Dear Friend of Arts Education:

It is with a great deal of pleasure and enthusiasm that we release this report on the progress the California Arts Council has made this past year in arts in education.

In July 2001, the Arts Council began to plan for three new arts in education programs, made available through the historic generosity and vision of Governor Gray Davis, who augmented the CAC's budget by $10 million. We rolled out these programs throughout the year. What a year it has been. With these additional resources the Arts Council served hundreds of thousands of new students and thousands of new teachers in arts education programming.

This report describes the new programs developed by the CAC and also speaks about several other activities and endeavors that we began in 2001. It includes new partnerships with some old friends like the PTA, the California Department of Education, who themselves made historic strides. We also worked with the Los Angeles Arts Commission on their "mapping" project "Arts in Focus" and with Americans for the Arts on a comprehensive statewide "mapping" project of our own. We began a long-term relationship with WestEd, our new partner in evaluation and research and continued to expand the Local Arts Education Partnership Program.

Finally, we directed new efforts toward arts education research. We contracted with Arts, Inc. to produce the most widely sought after document in our history, the Arts In Education Research Compendium and the also with B/R/S Group's Public Opinion Survey on the Arts. These two documents are available to download on our website at www.cac.ca.gov.

I hope you will use this document wherever and whenever you can. Please feel free to make copies, send them to your school boards, your districts and arts organizations and to the press. Use it as a handout whenever you visit a legislator.

Sincerely,

Paul Minicucci
Deputy Director

in Education

In Fiscal Year 2000-2001, Governor Davis and the Legislature increased the Arts Council budget by $10 million to build the capacity for arts education services to our schools. This historic increase created the opportunity for the Arts Council to dramatically increase its arts education offerings. The Arts Council, in consultation with the Secretary of Education, developed three new programs and one new activity. The programs include the Arts Partnerships for Education, Arts in Education Demonstration Projects, and Exemplary Arts Education Projects. Together with the CAC's Artists in Schools program these programs allowed the Arts Council to serve over 1,200 schools and 451 school districts, making the CAC Arts Education Initiative the largest such arts education program in the country. All of these new programs are described in more detail in the Grant Programs section of this report.

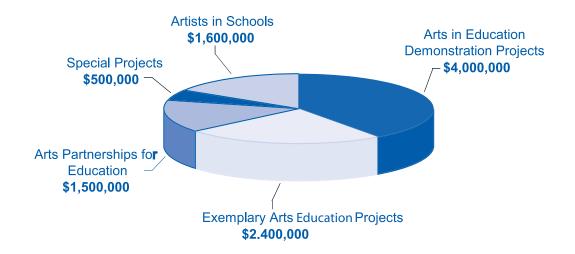

"Arts education not only enlarges the intellectual world of students who receive it, it provides a skilled workforce for a prominent element of the California economy. From Hollywood to Multimedia Gulch in San Francisco, artistic talent is the basis for business success."

San Diego Union-Tribune editorial, December 15, 2000

In addition, the CAC developed a new activity called the California Creativity Forum, a blue ribbon panel of experts drawn from the highest levels of the education, entertainment, and high technology sectors of our state. The Creativity Forum is founded on the principle that the development of an educated and creative pool of workers is critical to the economic and civic future of our state. The purpose of the Creativity Forum is to explore how California schools can better serve the creative needs of California's workforce. The Creativity Forum is co-chaired by First Lady Sharon Davis, Steven J. Fogel, Arts Council Chairman and Harold Williams, President Emeritus of The J. Paul Getty Trust. The Forum held two public meetings during 2000-2001.

The Arts Council convened several other meetings and conferences in arts education. In May 2001, the Arts Council convened the first meeting of County and District Arts Education coordinators from around California in Pasadena to discuss ways of making the arts basic to the state's schools. The County Coordinators' meeting was held in conjunction with the Model Arts Program Conference. The CAC staff made panel presentations at this conference. The Local Arts Education program was the subject of a presentation Council staff made at a national conference of arts education leaders held in North Carolina. The Arts Council also contracted with WestEd, a California based education evaluation and research company to hold two two-day meetings called "Proving Your Point" to assist arts education project leaders to evaluate the effectiveness of their projects. These meetings drew over 100 arts education project staff from all parts of California.

The Local Arts Education Partnership Program, the first legislatively mandated arts education program in the country, continued to grow thanks to a record number of consumers purchasing the Arts License Plate. More than $490,000 in funds were awarded to 17 grantees this year in this unique program. The program requires a coordination of arts education programs through local school boards and local arts agencies.

Mapping Projects

One of the most significant unanswered questions about arts education in California is the size and scope of arts education programs in the local school districts. No agency or report has previously attempted to do a comprehensive review of arts in schools. In 2000-2001 the Arts Council set out to do just that. The Arts Council contracted with Americans for the Arts to develop a "map" of arts education programs throughout the state in the Exemplary Arts Education Program. The ensuing questionnaire used by over 100 arts education organizations and schools has for the first time, described the state of arts education in California schools. The survey instrument used in this project is fast becoming a model for other states. The report from this project is due to be published early in 2002. The CAC also joined other funders to support the first ever "mapping" project of all 82 school districts in Los Angeles County. This report titled "Arts Education in Focus" was commissioned by the Arts Education Task Force of Arts for LA and prepared by Museum Without Walls. It sparked a renewal of efforts to place arts education at the forefront of school reform.

Evaluation in Arts Education

The debate among researchers about the impact of the arts in lack L schools has raged throughout the last decade, often sparking highly public and acrimonious exchanges. Several high profile reports in the 1990s suggested the arts could produce dramatic gains in achievement and behavior among students. In 2000 a journal article by respected educators allegedly refuted the notion that the arts can increase student achievement on SAT scores and on other tests. When the Arts Council conceived of its Demonstration Projects Program, it set out to establish the most comprehensive and valid evaluation paradigm ever attempted. The Arts Council hired WestEd, a prominent evaluation company to analyze its 56 Demonstration projects. The evaluation of the Demonstration projects is measuring exact changes in the affective domain, that is, changes in student self-concept, attendance and behavior as well as cognitive improvement in the arts and other subjects. In 2002 the WestEd evaluation will also begin measuring the impacts of the Exemplary Arts Education Program.

The B/R/S Public Opinion Survey "Participation and Perception of the Arts in California"

The arts community and its supporters in California have long held the belief that the arts were considered by decision makers, the general public and the media as a "frill" or a "luxury." There has been a general sense that the arts had marginal support among various sectors of our society in times of economic upturns but were vulnerable during recessions. The CAC designed a study, funded by the James Irvine and the David and Lucille Packard Foundations and performed by the public opinion and social research company, B/R/S Group, Inc. , that explodes those impressions about the arts. Conducted during the spring and summer of 2001, the study "Participation and Perception of the Arts in California," is based upon 1,200 random 15- to 20-minute telephone interviews with a representative sample of the English speaking general public (18-69 years of age in California). B/R/S also conducted 6 two-hour focus groups (eight to nine people each) on their attitudes towards the arts in three cities.

The results of both the quantitative and qualitative research are stunning in several ways. First, the quantitative results showed remarkable broad based support for public funding for the arts among all segments of the population: young and old, rural and urban, among all racial and ethnic groups, and across all economic strata. The survey revealed that the public supports the arts more broadly and deeply than anyone had previously realized. The qualitative results were more stirring. Focus groups literally poured their hearts out about the need for arts in our society, particularly for children.

The B/R/S Public Opinion Survey continued . . .

Some of the most salient points included the following:

- 86% are willing to pay between $1 and $5 a year more in California taxes, providing the money is earmarked for the arts;
- Two thirds of Californians (67%) would like to see additional funding for arts targeted to their community;
- * A large majority of Californians (75%) felt strongly or very strongly that "the arts improve academic performance of children;"
- $\frac{1}{8}$  75% felt strongly or very strongly that "the arts are an investment in the future of our children;"
- Nover two-thirds of Californians (69%) felt strongly that "The arts are important to the health of California's entertainment industries;"
- * All (100%) parents state that arts education is critically important. 63% said "the arts are as important or more important than academics;"
- Most Californians (91%) said "arts in schools are as important or more important than athletics;"
- $\mbox{\ensuremath{\not=}}\xspace A vast majority (90\%) believed state government should fund the arts; and$
- * 91% said local government should fund the arts.

An Arts In Education Research Compendium

The Arts Council has felt for some time that a void exists in the research literature in arts education for practitioners, artists and educators. Over the past decade the field often cited various articles, conclusions and findings in support of arts education and its impacts on learning and behavior. Nearly as many naysayers cast doubt on the authenticity, validity or significance of some of these claims. The Arts Council contracted with Arts, Inc. for a research compendium that would lay to rest some of the controversy and give the field for the first time a comprehensive and authentic compendium of research on arts education. Written by David Pankratz, Ph.D., this document titled An Arts in Education Research Compendium is divided into five sections, including:

- * Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs) About Arts in Education Research.
- ** Research Compendium including subsections on Arts Education and Academic Achievement, Brain Research and Learning in the Arts, Testing Assessment and Evaluation and six other informative issues.
- California Websites, Publications and Initiatives.
- * Arts in Education Websites.
- ** Future Research including numerous on-going research conducted by or about CAC arts education programs.

The FAQs Section includes 48 key questions often asked by decision makers such as school boards or superintendents about the impacts of arts education, program strategies, resources and many other areas. Each question comes with a response and one or more citations in the literature supporting each answer. The entire compendium may be downloaded from the CAC website at www.cac.ca.gov.

Arts in Education Program

The Arts in Education Program enables Arts Council grantees to develop, expand or create arts in education programs in partnership with school districts for K-12 students throughout California.

New Program Arts in Education Demonstration Projects Program 37 grants totaling $4,286,461

The Arts in Education Demonstration Projects Program seeks to make arts basic to schools by defining models that work and describing why and how they are successful so other schools and communities can impart or emulate these "best practices." The project requires a partnership between a community arts organization and schools, an evaluation component, replicability, visibility, the inclusion of artists and a focus on arts education in the school during the K-12 school day. A first round of funding was awarded in February to 37 grantees serving 205 schools, working in 51 school districts.

Grantee Highlights:

California State University, Sacramento (CSUS)

This Demonstration Project will focus on MOSAICS, a replicable program of study for the CSUS Master of Arts in Education degree. MOSAICS assists graduate students in the development of individual curriculum and assessment projects for integrating the arts in school including the use of multicultural artists and arts resources. The initial two-year program of study registered 53 credentialed teachers, which is larger than any other masters program in the College of Education. It will include curriculum development, technology training, building the capacity of participating schools, and the enhancement of multicultural arts programs.

New Program Arts Partnerships for Education Program 18 grants totaling $1,100,000

Arts Partnerships for Education funded 18 partnerships under the umbrella of a clearinghouse project for business partnerships for arts education. Arts, Inc. of Los Angeles, served as the clearinghouse assisting the Council to raise private sector support for arts/school projects, promote these programs as models, develop evaluation protocols and to implement a public relations and marketing program. The projects incorporate extensive arts programming in low performing schools and in communities of need to improve the learning environment and the school culture. The 18 grantees worked in 16 school districts, serving 56 schools.

Grantee Highlights:

Los Angeles Center for Education Research (LACER)

Providing arts-based after-school programs in music, dance, visual arts, and theater representing diverse cultural traditions, LACER employs professional artists to work with 1,500 students (ages 10-14) in four Los Angeles Unified School District schools in low-income neighborhoods. LACER has an advisory council of representatives from business, labor, the nonprofit arts, the media, higher education, the Los Angeles City Council, and the entertainment industry. Current supporters include Paramount Pictures, Pacific Bell, 20th Century Fox, UFCW Local 770, Eastman Kodak, and Local 777. Programs are provided through a partnership between parents, teachers and professional artists. CAC funding of $105,000 will expand programs, develop a new strategic plan, and extend the Corporate Donor Campaign.

Local Arts Education Partnership Program

17 grants totaling $493,000

Local Arts Education Partnership Program operates in partnership with the California Department of Education. It was created through legislative mandate in 1996 and is funded by sales of the Arts License Plate. In FY 2000-2001 matching grants of $29,000 were awarded to successful grantees. The Local Arts Education Partnership Program encourages a locally-based, collaborative, inclusive approach to improving arts education, using existing community arts resources and artists in a planned and coordinated way. The CAC funds consortia of local arts agencies, local education agencies, and arts and community resources to plan, implement and evaluate comprehensive arts education programs in their local school districts with the goal to strengthen basic arts skills and knowledge in California's public schools. "Arts" include the four disciplines of dance, theater, music and the visual arts, and other creative art forms. The 17 grantees served 106 schools, in 25 school districts.

Grantee Highlights:

Cultural Arts Council of Sonoma County

Partnering with the Santa Rosa City School District, the Cultural Arts Council of Sonoma County created the ArtQuest program. ArtQuest students representing all art disciplines, linked their artistic studies with younger students in the City of Santa Rosa.

Through staff development, cross disciplinary planning, in-depth use of community resources and technology, the project strengthened visual and performing arts in five schools in the Santa Rosa City School District. In accordance with the Visual and Performing Arts Framework and newly adopted State Content Standards, arts curricula was designed and activated by teams of ten art specialists, six core academic teachers, local arts agency and local education agency project coordinators, guest artists and other community arts specialists. The project focused on the high school level and incorporates four area feeder schools: three elementary schools and a middle school.

New Program Exemplary Arts Education Program 110 grants totaling $2,300,358

Exemplary Arts Education awards funding to exemplary (highest ranking) Arts Council grantees that have established arts in education programs. The grant requires a response to two major questions: 1) What is the "value added" or "leveraged partnerships" that additional funding will bring; and 2) How will the grantee document and evaluate the project. The reports submitted by grantees on the additional work accomplished demonstrate the profound benefits of this funding:

- * 136,364 additional students served
- ₹ 700 additional schools served
- 2,098 additional classrooms served
- * 1,096 additional teachers trained in incorporating the arts in the classroom
- * 451 additional artists trained to go into the classrooms
- 26 additional artists contracted to work in the schools

Grantee Highlights:

Carlsbad Arts Office, Carlsbad

The Arts Office was established by City Ordinance in 1986 to develop, promote and coordinate the arts in Carlsbad and to encourage public awareness and interest in the visual and performing arts.

The Arts Office provides cultural services throughout the Carlsbad community, working in partnership with local organizations, artists and other city departments to advance the arts in the areas of arts education, support for local arts groups, programs for youth, families and seniors, information services, special events and public art. The Arts Office has established a partnership with the Encinitas Union School District and the Encinitas Commission for the Arts in its Project SHAPES to assess the arts at nine schools using the California Department of Education Visual and Performing Arts Framework.

The Exemplary Arts Education Program grant will provide funds to build on previous arts education work by adding theater and dance activities in grades 4-6 at El Camino Creek Elementary School. The grant will also provide an artist to enhance the school's gallery curriculum and add two Gallery Family Days. It is the goal of the partnership to expand Project SHAPES district-wide.
